FYI—The reporter who Mark referred to NOAA has contacted Michael Millstein in Will's office. It looks like an interview has been scheduled with Will for Monday afternoon. I think some coordination with Millstein and Will are in order in terms of the talking points given the sensitivities. Mark, could you contact Millstein and help us coordinate the message? Thanks.

All,

I had a press request today for an interview on Oregon's non-point source pollution program under CZARA from Jefferson Public Radio, which is in southern Oregon but shares stories with other NPR stations in the Northwest. The Oregon Board of Forestry this week is discussing new riparian rules to address our concerns and the reporter will be covering the Board meeting and wants a NOAA voice to explain the backstory on the history, why this is important to us, the basis of the disapproval and why we're pressing Oregon on this issue. A side element of this is that small forest owners (family forestland owners) are saying the new rules will pinch them and are providing some tension around the Board of Forestry meeting.

I talked with Mark at EPA and we agreed that this would be an important interview for Will to do to follow up on our points during the initial announcement. I have set up an interview for him on Monday afternoon. Will prep him with the talking points, etc. Just want everyone to be aware of this.

Thanks,
Michael
